16	Virtual learning is a round peg and it's been painfully obvious that the school system has been struggling to fit it into the square hole of the standard curriculum/program all year. There has been very little innovation or accommodation made for the virtual program, and that appears to apply to both the students and the teachers who are working with them. Also, there has been almost no acknowledgment of the fact that parents of virtual students have essentially become unpaid employees of the school district, and that teachers of virtual classrooms have been forced into IT roles that I imagine most are not qualified for. Now that schools are pushing even harder to get everyone back into school buildings as COVID numbers spike, the state is threatening to pull/suspend the licenses of teachers who don't want to be subjected to the virus in environments that cannot guarantee their safety. This is unconscionable, and I can't believe anyone with any direct involvement in our schools would support it. This comment is wider than our child's school, but the school is constrained to what the county and state force and/or allow it to do to some degree.	12/14/2020 4:20 PM

Q28 Each school expends Title I funds to support parent involvement each year. Many schools spend these funds on items such as food and supplies for parent activities, materials and books for students to take home such as agendas or take-home folders, parent education opportunities such as Latino Literacy Night and employees dedicated at the school to support parental involvement such as a parent liaison. How would you like to see the parental involvement funds used at your child's school?
